Mrs Kiran Narayan Taksande defended her PhD entitled "Exploration of the Ionic Conduction Properties of Porous MOF Materials" on March 23rd 2022 face to a committee at the University of Montpellier, France. Her efficiently organized, clear and synthetic presentation was done in English using well-designed slides. The presentation highlighted her scientific and didactic skills as well as her knowledge of the research project. The objectives and the strategy adopted to carry out the work were particularly appreciated: the jury highlighted the strong connection between experimental and modelling which led to a better understanding of ionic conduction in MOF materials at the molecular scale showing promising alternative to benchmarked materials. The exchange with the jury allowed to address many points exposed in the manuscript but also to broaden the scope of the discussion. The candidate responded appropriately to the questions asked, demonstrating her ability to carry out research activities. For all the above reasons, the committee has unanimously decided to award Mrs Kiran Narayan Taksande with the title of Doctor of the University of Montpellier, doctoral school "Sciences Chimiques Balard", speciality "Chemistry and Physico-Chemistry of Materials".
